He's back! Or at least he will be in May when Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull hits theaters. To fans longing for his return, adventurer Indiana Jones, played by Harrison Ford, offers a fresh breath of courage, boldness, and strength. Signs of Indiana Jones's return were everywhere at the recent International Toy Fair in New York City where companies from around the world came to show off their new wares. The new toys included a Taters of the Lost Ark set with a dressed-for-adventure Mr. Potato Head, who plays the movie's theme song when his hat is placed on his head, and a new line of LEGO® Indiana Jones™ play sets. Manufacturers trust that those who loved the 1980s classic movies will help a whole new generation appreciate the return of this hero.

THINK ABOUT IT

- The original Indiana Jones movies were popular in the 1980s. Why would the same characters interest today's kids?
- Why do people admire bold, strong, and courageous characters?

Echoes of Glory

Have you ever had an adult tell you about a place or event from the past that was especially meaningful to that person? Did you ever get to experience the event with that individual? Stories handed down from one generation to the next keep traditions and values alive. Pick one story that's been shared with you; share it with a classmate.

Thank God for using bold kings and prophets of Old Testament times in His plan for your salvation.
